Dear Mr. Galazan,

Please find the results below, of our research into the sale/possession of the DP-12 shotgun in the State of California.

The DP-12 is not an "assault weapon" because it is not named, and because it is not semi-automatic. It also does it have a revolving cylinder.

Although the DP-12 does have a pistol-grip, it should be remembered that these are only a concern on semi-automatic rifles. The only shotguns which are regulated are those which are semi-automatic, or which have a revolving action.

Also please note that overall length is only an issue with centerfire rifles.

The magazine capacity limit in California is 10 rounds. The DP-12 has two separate magazines, and so it is compliant with it's seven round magazines. There is no law against a firearm having more than one fixed magazine.

In summary, there is no law in the State of California which would prevent the sale or possession of the model DP-12 shotgun. I trust that this information will be found helpful.

Thank you,
